

Invitation Letter for the Diplomatic briefing on the economic situation in Ukraine,
March 13, 2025

Dear Colleagues,

The Institute for Economic Research and Policy Consulting is pleased to invite you to our regular monthly "Diplomatic Briefing," where IER experts share their insights on the current economic situation in Ukraine and present the latest results of our business tendency survey.

The upcoming Diplomatic Briefing, focused on "Ukraine's economic situation and challenges in February 2025", will take place online via Zoom on March 13, 2025, Tuesday, from 16:00 to 17:00 Kyiv time (9:00-10:00 EST / 15:00-16:00 CEST).

In February and early March, the uncertainty increased as U.S. support became less certain than before, creating risks for Ukraine in terms of security, stability, and strategic decision-making. At the same time, the EU appears to be consolidating its efforts, advancing plans to strengthen its defense capabilities, increase defense funding, and reaffirm its long-term commitment to supporting Ukraine.

The UK, Canada, Japan continues supporting Ukraine through various mechanisms and they are also contributors to the ERA loan mechanism. Meanwhile, a staff-level agreement has been reached on the seventh review of the IMF program, though Ukraine faced challenges with the implementation of one of the structural benchmark. Overall, the international financial support for 2025 is rather sufficient, but there are risks there, which we will discuss briefly during the meeting.

The economic development has been undermined by the Russian shelling of energy network and seaports infrastructure. This resulted in power outages for industry and in some regions for population, while also creating risks for exports via the Ukrainian Sea Corridor.

The IER experts will discuss these and other recent economic trends - including trade developments, monetary policy, inflation – as well as challenges and outlook during the Briefing. Additionally, the results of the IER Business Tendency Survey, conducted in February, will be presented.

Speakers:

Oleksandra Betliy, macroeconomic, public finance, social and healthcare expert, IER Leading Research Fellow;

Vitaliy Kravchuk, macroeconomic, monetary policy and financial market expert, IER Leading Research Fellow;
