Tähelepanu! Tegemist on välisvõrgust saabunud kirjaga. Tundmatu saatja korral palume linke ja faile mitte avada. Dear Sir or Madam, I hope this email finds you well.

I am contacting you from for a study we are conducting on the identification of professions for the extension of automatic recognition through common training frameworks under Directive 2005/36/EC, commissioned by the European Commission. This study aims to identify regulated professions that could potentially be fit for the development of a common training framework (CTF) under Article 49a of the Directive and define the concrete components such potential CTFs could include. CTFs are as a common set of minimum knowledge, skills and competences needed to practice a specific profession in participating EU countries, and serve as a system for recognising professional qualifications required for entering a regulated profession. The aim of a CTF is to facilitate recognition of qualifications, without the need to harmonise national education or regulatory frameworks, thereby facilitating the movement of professionals within the EU.

At this stage of our study, we are mapping the national regulatory framework of 10 professions that were selected in the first phase of this Study. The aim of this next phase is to assess the feasibility of introducing a CTF for each of them. This mapping will consider their national frameworks with regards to regulatory status, qualifications and training requirement in each EU Member State. For this reason, we would like to ask your help by providing input through a short online survey for the profession of .

Please note that this is the generic name used in the which refers to specific professions regulated by national law in Member States. You can find the exact profession that it corresponds to in your Member State by clicking on the link above. It is possible that in some cases, more than one national profession has been notified by Member States under this generic name. For this reason, we have identified a list of professions regulated at national level that we consider for our research, and we kindly ask you to fill in the survey with reference to the profession there indicated. You can find this list in the surveys introduction, by opening the survey via the link below. Should you consider that another profession regulated in your Member State would be more appropriate under this generic denomination, please flag this to us via email and complete the survey for that profession instead. In addition, should you identify any information in the Regulated Professions Database that is significantly outdated, incorrect or imprecise, we would be grateful if you could also flag this to us. You can access and fill in the survey here:

Your input would be essential to ensure that the mapping exercise reflects the national context accurately. We would be grateful to receive your input by 13 May 2026.

We identified your contact details through the European Commissions as the national competent authority for this profession or it was provided to us by the national coordinator for Directive 2005/36/EC. If appropriate, please feel free to forward this survey to the colleague best suited to respond within your organisation.

Please note that it is possible that you receive this email for several different professions as some of the selected professions fall under the same competent authority. We kindly ask you to fill in each survey separately for the distinct professions concerned.

For further information, please refer to the attached accreditation letter from the European Commission and the privacy notice.

Thank you very much for your help in advance. Should you have any questions or require further information or linguistic support, please do not hesitate to reach out to me (at ) and my colleague Anna Rossa (at ).

Kind regards,
