

METHOD VALIDATION AND UNCERTAINTY OF MEASUREMENT FOR MICROBIOLOGICAL METHODS
2nd – 4th SEPTEMBER 2024 - ONLINE

ISO 17025:2017 was developed with the objective of promoting confidence in the operation of laboratories. The standard contains requirements for laboratories to enable them to demonstrate their competency to generate valid results.

Method validation is a key requirement of ISO17025 and ISO 15189 accreditation standards and other regulations and directives. Method validation is the process that provides evidence that a test method is capable of producing results that are suitable for a particular application. The course aims to provide attendees with a fundamental understanding of the importance of method validation, the methodology for conducting method validation in microbiological laboratories and the evaluation of method performance characteristics using appropriate techniques.

This course aims to:

- Provide a deep understanding of the importance of method validation in testing laboratories.
- Provide the tools and methodology for conducting method validation.
- Expose delegates to practical examples of method validation reinforcing the theoretical concepts delivered during the course.
- Provide delegates with the skills and knowledge to perform their own validations.
- Enable participants to meet the accreditation requirements of their testing laboratories.

COURSE CONTENT

Module 1: Introduction to Method Validation

Module 2: Ensuring the validity of results in Microbiology testing laboratories.

Module 3: Reagents and test media

Module 4: Selection of Methods

Module 5: The Validation Plan

Module 6: Validation of Qualitative Methods Performance parameters and their estimation

Module 7: Validation of Quantitative methods Performance parameters and their estimation

Module 8: Validation of Commercial test kits Performance parameters and their estimation

Module 9: Evaluation of Measurement Uncertainty

Module 10: Method Validation Report
